A Great National Work.

The Centennial History of the United States, from the discovery of the American Continent to the close of the First Century of American Independence. By James D.
McCabe. Author of "A Manual of General History," "The Great Republic," etc., etc.

There has long been a great and universally felt want of a History of the United States suitable for general use. This want is now being supplied by The National Publishing Co., of Philadelphia, who have issued a handsome volume, styled "The Centennial History of the United States," by James D. McCabe, a well-known historical writer. This work will, undoubtedly, take rank as the Standard History of the United States. It is no dry mass of details—no bombastic effort to indurate the national pride, but is a clear, vivid and brilliant narrative of the events of our history, from the discovery of the American Continent down to present time. It traces the evidences of that mysterious race, the first occupants of our country, and gives a most interesting account of the Indians of North America, from the time of the coming of the white men. The voyages of Columbus, the explorations of the different nations of Europe and the final occupation and conquest of the land by England, are told with graphic power.

Every step of our colonial history is traced with patient fidelity, and the courses of those noble, and we trust, enduring institutions which have made our country free and great, are shown with remarkable clearness. The causes of our great struggle for Independence are told with a logical force and ability unsurpassed in any work of the day. Then follows a clear and succinct account of the formation of the Federal Constitution; the establishment of the Union; the course of affairs until the breaking out of the Southern War with England; and a full and comprehensive account of that War and its results. The events of our career from the close of that contest to the commencement of the Civil War, follow in their order. The history of the Civil War is related with intense vigor, and with a strict fidelity to truth. The author pleads the cause of no party or section. He states facts, points out the lessons which they teach, and appealing to neither passion nor political feeling, trusts to the good sense of his countrymen to sustain his views. The book contains an Appendix, giving an account of the approaching Centennial Exhibition.

It is comprised in one large, handsome octavo volume of 925 pages and contains 443 engravings on steel and wood of historical personages and scenes. The price is so low that all can afford to purchase a copy, and each subscriber is presented with a superb litho-graphic engraving of the Centennial Exhibition Building and Grounds. It is sold by subscription only, and the publishers want agents in every county.

Leap Year Rules—For Ladies.

1. Call in a handsome carriage for the gentleman who is to honor you at eight o'clock sharp. Entertain the dear old mammy for an hour and a half, till she finishes her exquisite toilet. When he comes down and gives you one finger to press, tell him she looks lovely to-night, and try to look as silly as you can.
2. Conduct him tenderly to the carriage and stow him away on the back seat, with all his wraps. If it be cold have a hot brick ready for his little feet.
On arriving, lead him to the warm and elegant dressing-room and go and stick your coverings somewhere in the little cold dressing-room—under the bed, if you can't do any better.

3. Button his gloves for him and escort him to the parlors or ball-room.
Seat him on a sofa and yourself—on the wall adjacent. Try to look happy, and rest assured that you don't succeed.
"During the evening see that the gentleman is fanned when he is warm, lemnaded when thirsty, and protected from draughts. Don't forget to say sweet and silly things to him whenever opportunity offers."

4. If the gentleman be a good dancer keep him to yourself, and on no account suffer him to accept invitations to dance from ladies prettier than yourself. If he be but indifferent leave him to the tender mercies of the homely girls and the wall.

5. When you invite a gentleman to dance, say with an idiotic smile: "Mist—w—may I have the pleasure of—"
In the lancers talk interestingly of the weather; and in the grand chain tramp on your partner's coat-tails, if possible.
6. Manage to slip out slyly several times during the evening, and come in chewing coffee or "ricks."

7. At supper stand behind his chair and work yourself to a white heat keeping him supplied with the choicest delicacies, but though you faint, don't taste a morsel yourself until he has laid away the entire bill of fare and three plates of ice-cream. If he wears anything which coffee will stain, manage to spill some on it.

8. When you leave you must not gum-ble because somebody has sat on your hat in the little cold dressing-room, or made a shoe-brush of your cloak, but you may wear a little on the stairs.
9. Put on his Arctic overboots for him and place him in a carriage. Now go back to the dressing-room for him at least three times for stray fangs and gloves.
Yawn all the way home. Kiss the driver for not stopping exactly before his pa's front door. Say good night, and whisper coo-ee to stop at Helly's on the way to your residence.

THE PEOPLE'S PAPOO—There is no medicine prescribed by physicians, or sold by Druggists, that carries such evidence of success and superior virtue as Boscawen's Great Syrup for severe Coughs, Colds settled on the Bones, Consumption, or any disease of the Throat and Lungs. A proof of that fact is that any person afflicted, can get a Sample Bottle for 10 cents and try its superior effect before buying the regular size at 75 cents. It has lately been introduced in this country from Germany, and its wonderful cures are astonishing everyone that use it. Three doses will relieve any case, try it. Sold by Geo. R. Davis, Druggist.

"Pity his Family."

A man falls into embarrassments, which ultimately overwhelm him in bankruptcy or drive him into rognery and crime. He was yesterday respected, influential and supposed to be affluent, and his family were treated and treated themselves accordingly; but to-day he is disgraced and steered clear of—without resources or prospects—very likely in prison and exposed to ignominious punishment.
"Vile wretch!" say the million; "it is good enough for him, but we must pity his poor family."

Certainly, we must pity them—pity all who suffer—still more all who sin and suffer. They need pity, and there is no doubt that we shall pity them too much. But the impression conveyed of the innocence of the fallen man's family, and their merited exposure to want and ignominy, is often very far from the truth.

In fact, half the men who are loathed as dragging down their families to shame and destitution are really themselves dragged down by those families—driven to bankruptcy, shame and crime by the thoughtless and basely selfish extravagance of wife and children. Let a man be in the way of receiving considerable money, and having property in his hands, and his family can rarely be made to comprehend and realize that there is any limit to his abilities to give and spend. Fine dresses and ornaments for wife and daughters; spending money and broadcloth for hopeful sons—costly parties every now and then, and richer furniture and more of it at times—these are a few of the blind drains on "the governor's" means which are perpetually in action. "O, what a hundred dollars to a man doing such a business?" is the indignant question in case of any demure or remonstrance on his part. Not one of them could bear to disgrace him by earning a dollar; they couldn't go out for fear his credit would suffer.

They can't see how a man who can get discounts in Bank need ever be short of money or stingy in using it. All his talk of difficulties or hard times they regard as customary fables, intended to scrimp their drafts on his purse or enhance their sense of his generosity. When it is so easy to fill up a check, why will he be hogish? Let him give fifty dollars to any philanthropic object, or invest five hundred, however safely, in any attempt to meliorate the sufferings of the poor, and they now see clearly that he has hoards of gold, and can just as well give them all dresses and jewels as not.—Thus the man of means or of business is too often regarded by his family as a sponge to be squeezed, a goose to be plucked, an orange to be sucked, a spring to be drank from when thirsty without at all diminishing its flow. The stuff is there in profusion—the only trouble is to make him give it up.

In vain he remonstrates—implores—puts down his foot. He cannot be effectually contending with those he loves best—he wants quiet at home in order to mature his plans and perfect his operations. If he resists opportunity, the purses are not going, and what man can stand the April showers of feminine sorrow? He gives way at last and throws down the money demanded, hoping that some great news by the next steamer, some turn of luck in his business, will enable him to pay it. Perhaps it does, and he looks up; perhaps it doesn't, and this last feather has broken the elephant's back. The end, however near or distant, is morally certain. Treated always as a mine to be opened at will, he finally grows desperate and rushes into reckless speculation or blasting crime, and is overwhelmed with ruin. "Selfish villain!" say the ignorant crowd; "how could he run such a career? How we pity his family!"—No doubt of it! But if you knew more, perhaps you would pity him.

LADY CELEBRITIES AT WASHINGTON.— A Washington correspondent of the Milwaukee "Journal" says: "The homes of the two Senators from the wilds of Arkansas are found to be graced by ladies who should be placed well up towards the front in any regular sequence of attractiveness. Senator Dorsey, the bankrupt friend of Boss Oliver and Chief Justice of the 'Poker Jack' McClure, occupies the ill-omened 'Sickie' house, which is now owned by Commodore Stockton.
Mrs. Dorsey is young, very pretty, and next to Madame Matrical, the Mexican minister's wife, the most showily dressed of the lady companions of the foremost men of the nation are hard-featured and common place. They remind one of the dismal mahogany and horse hair furniture of country sitting-rooms."

What is the Value of a life? Gold cannot measure it. Yet when menaced by a violent cough or cold, or any disease leading to consumption, a single dollar invested in HALL'S HONEY OF HOREHOUND AND TAR will unquestionably preserve it.
